First Appearance of : Cheeky Monkey, Shergar

Trivia : Amanda uses a bag of McDougalls Plain Flour to represent "Crappy Flowers"!

Alan #1 & Alan #2 were the first IVF twins.

Amanda uses a puppet wig on a string in "Hey Big Spider"

The "Intermission" video features The Devil & Shergar while Dexter The Dragon can be seen in the background.

In the Banbury Rugby Club performance from 2018 Gervais is named as Alan #2's hairdresser.

The PDF on Scott's book "Songs In The Key Of Tarn" is available from the website.

Scott names the Shergar puppet during the quiz after the Red Rum question.

The Strings version of "The Lady In Greggs" was played at the funeral of Amanda's Dad Michael as it was his favourite song.

Quotes : "My liver is currently Employee of the month".

"Do frogs have arms?"

"Hopefully Amanda this week won't decide to throw anything at me and shit me up!"

Scott's Tank Top Badges : None

Pre-Show Nerves : (Length: 5:20)

Records Played:

Song playing is not loud enough to decipher (by System of a Down, a heavy metal band)

General:

Tonight, Scott has gone all pastel in a white shirt with banana design under a medium-pink, lemon and mint tank top with a mint V-neck and borders.

This is the first pre-show with records playing in the background.

Scott explains that before a gig, he often tries to calm his nerves by pacing up and down.

Scott's uncle Bill pops into the chat thread and Scott informs viewers he is the bass player with Showaddywaddy.

"We've got quite an unusual set list," Scott says. He explains he's trying to play songs he hasn't played for a while to keep things fresh.

A fan named Martin Street messages to say: "I'm naked."

"Oh dear," Scott replies, laughing.

Scott does a few shout outs.

Amanda's downstairs knitting again. She's working on a new tank top for Scott – a replica of his rainbow coloured, purple edged one. Scott has apparently stretched the other one and Amanda thinks it looks like a dress.

Ends: "See you over at YouTube in, in about six minutes or so. Ta raaaa! Byebye."

Aftershow : (Length: 22:21)

Location: The campervan

Songs Played:

When The Evening Sun Goes Down (From the Cammell Laird Social Club, an album by Half Man Half Biscuit)

Kids In America (Kim Wilde)

I Am An Astronaut (Ricky Wilde)

Shit Raffle Winner: Steve Todd

General:

Scott and Amanda have just legged it down to the campervan, requiring Amanda to have a toot of her inhaler.

Scott introduces the aftershow while Amanda settles. He then hands the camera over to her.

Amanda holds her knitting up...she's almost completed one side of Scott's new rainbow tank top. She's done 110 rows and needs to get to 130 before splitting for the V-neck (this will probably only make sense to knitters...but is the technical part of any tank top construction).

248 people tuned in this evening.

"I went puppet crazy," says Amanda.

She's brought her favourite puppet to the van (Shergar). Scott swings the camera around to reveal Amanda, and Shergar, who's delivering his usual toothy grin.

Scott says he's finding lockdown hard because he misses interacting with real people. He stayed indoors for the first four weeks, only venturing out for the odd walk.

"Sometimes it's ended up at Lidl for beer," says Amanda.

A special shout out for Wendy Cooper because she sent a message at the end of the main show which cheered Scott up.

Scott's guitar is slightly out of tune as he dinged it on the side of the van on the way in. He gives the knobs a twiddle ready for some songs. Kicks off with a Half Man Half Biscuit number. Shergar joins in the singing.

Shergar does a big "Neiiggghhhh!" to camera as the song ends (Scott laughs). In a heartbeat, he starts playing the Neighbours theme tune.

During a rendition of 80s classic Kids in America, Scott randomly reminds viewers not to drink bleach (he was clearly recalling Donald Trump's daft comment about how to avoid coronavirus, while mid song).

I Am An Astronaut was selected by Amanda as a lullaby to get everyone in the mood for sleep.

Scott moves over to sit next to her. He spots that she's trying to get Shergar on to her arm again.

"Goodnight from Shergar," says Scott. Shergar neighs to camera, obligingly.

"Goodnight from Amanda." (She does a cheesy grin)

"It's been lovely to see yers. Take care of yerselves. And we'll hopefully see yer, either when this shitstorm's over, or next week...next week if yer tune in. God bless. Goodnight."
