On Screen Banner text: Scott Doonican Live Frum Barnsley Rock City

First Appearance of : Tank Top Badges

Trivia : The camera was originally reversed for the broadcast meaning Amanda had to write notes backwards, this has now been corrected so all notes read backwards!

"The Wath-On-Dearne Blues" is played on Scott's 1962 Rory Gallagher replica Stratocaster

The house phone rings just after "The Wath-On-Dearne Blues".

Amanda throws the hair from Zombie Scott during “Hey Big Spider” causing Scott to stop playing and many snorts of laughter from Amanda!

Scotts nickname for his sister Sarah is Marla after the character Marla Singer in “Fight Club” because of how she used to look on night outs!

Alans marriage vows excluded him from ever joining a Morris dance troop!

Scott lost Amanda’s engagement ring crowd surfing during “Jump Ararnd” – he was planning to propose to her on stage!

Quotes : “Give it up for Amanda and her rubber gloves!”

“I said there was not going to be any puppets in this show.”

Scott’s Tank Top Badges : Dennis The Menace & Richard Ayoade

Pre-Show Nerves : (Length: 3:11)

General:

Big Neet In missed a week, but returns tonight...back by popular demand.

Scott’s wig is rocking a bit of a tuft this evening!

He tries to flatten it and wonders where Gervais is when you need him.

Tonight’s attire is an orangey-red shirt under a mainly red, lemon-yellow and turquoise-blue striped tank top.

And tonight there are badges! Richard Ayoade and Dennis the Menace.

We are told Amanda is downstairs “getting herself, er...ready (giggles)...psyched up. Having a coffee before we start...n then she’ll be on’t gin.”

Scott’s says he’s been having some issues with the tablet this afternoon. He’s planning to see if ‘technical guru’ Bjorn can offer a solution when he speaks to him later.

Scott apologises in case the sound and visuals aren’t up to scratch tonight.

Some shout outs follow. The first name to receive a shout out in a pre-show is Alan Gary Smith, followed by Addie Burns and Simon Porter. And for any of you wondering – Kate Stevenson is the first lady to receive one, followed by Penelope Wortley.

Scott has Guinness this evening and thinks he ran out of Jack Daniels last night. “Maybe Amanda’s stashed some away...who knows!”

“I’m not doing any shout outs, so, shout out to you all now! There you go (waves to camera).”
No shout outs. What crazy thinking was this?!

The unruly tuft of hair managed to remain flat during the broadcast.

Ends: Scott tries to figure out how to turn the camera off.

Aftershow : (Length: 17:20)

Location: The campervan

Songs Played: We'll Meet Again (Vera Lynn – performed on ukulele)

Shit Raffle Winner: None announced during aftershow.

BNI #3 Aftershow video title on Facebook: After show party...

Scott, looking a wee bit tiddly opens with: "Ow do. I think we're on (his hand fiddles with the camera). There's not a great deal of, er, signal out here. We're...er...we're in the van." (Amanda waves)

Amanda says they got a bit emotional watching some of the videos of the Doonicans playing live, which were shown during the main show.

Scott has a tankard of wine on the go...a silver tankard of wine! (Small one)

Amanda is reluctant to appear on camera as she thinks she looks like a panda.

Scott refers to Amanda as 'Master of Puppets'.

Amanda apologises for the signage during the show as it appeared back to front. She had written the wording backwards thinking the camera would flip it...but it didn't.

Viewers had messaged to say the sound and video quality wasn't as good as previous broadcasts. Scott says sorry and explains he'd actually tried to improve the quality. 'Tech Guru' Bjorn has already been consulted and has provided a solution.

Viewing figures for the main show are down to half of what they were on the first week, so around 500.

Scott's still unsure of the future of BNI.

Based on the techy stuff Bjorn's taught him, Scott promises that next week's show will be "all bells and whistles," and says it's going to sound "shit ot".

Amanda chips in: "rather than shit."

Next week will be a tester. Scott says if decent numbers tune in, BNI will "become a thing".

Both Scott and Amanda recognise that keeping working, albeit virtually, is keeping him sane.

Amanda quips: "I think it'd be worth it fer't spider."

"You bastard!" Scott retorts, jokingly.

(Zombie Scott's hair had been thrown at him by Amanda earlier and shit him up)

Scott: "These tartan keks are gonna need a right wash later on."

Alan's wife, Claire is feeling much better after contracting coronavirus.

Big up to NHS workers.

Tom (The Devil) has had to shave his beard off as he's an NHS worker (to do with the fitting of face masks).

Scott's sister Marla has been making scrubs for the NHS (there's a nationwide campaign to do this).

Scott and Amanda came up with three taglines to rival the government's advice:

Stay at home Drink gin Eat pies.

Scott reckons people will be fine if they follow this advice.

Amanda mentions there being more puppets in next week's show.

Scott exclaims: "No bloody puppets!"

Ends, Scott puts his face close to the camera, says slowly: "There's. No. Puppets. Next. Week. Please. Nooo. Puppetttssss!"
