General:

Beats on the deck this evening: Split Enz.

“So, how the devil are y’all?...Evening.”

Scott’s sporting his trademark rainbow tank top and lime green shirt...a minor tuft on the go on his wig, but otherwise, silky smooth.

Roll call.

Alan is a grandad again! His daughter Nicola and her partner Loz have had a baby boy named Cash Fitzgerald.

More hellos...hello, hello, hello!

A fan has mailed Scott Breakfast At Tiffany’s on DVD, which he’s very pleased about. He and Amanda are planning to watch it after tonight’s show. They also have Aladdin to watch as Amanda’s never seen it. Scott says he was thinking of playing his Aladdin soundtrack for Pre-show Nerves, but thought against it “because, well...I mean, you can av too much Disney in yer life can’t yer?”

Scott declares it’s “bloody boiling” in his upstairs room.

He spots his Uncle Billy (Billy Norman) on the chat thread, who plays in a band called The Radio Racers. Describes him as a “bloody good bassist”.

Says Uncle Billy’s new song is “catchier than Covid” : )

“Anyway...have fun you BEAUTIFUL people...we’ll see you at the aftershow afterwards. Erm...an’ enjoy the show. Ta-ra...Bye!”

Aftershow : (Length: 41:51)

Location: The campervan

Songs Played:

Does Your Mother Know (ABBA)

Hungry Like The Wolf (Duran Duran)

Mrs Vandebilt (Wings)

Ain't No Pleasing You (Chas & Dave)

Shit Raffle Winner: Jo Pollard (and Alfie) & John Bigland

General:

“So, good evening. Welcome to the aftershow er...shindig...er, with er, with...with me and Amanda.”

Scott says Shergar was his highlight tonight, playing Crazy Horses on stylophone.

Amanda's Best Puppetry award sits proudly in a corner of the van.

Fan Graham Newton points out that some apple trees can have pink flowers as well as white ones. This is in reference to a quiz answer which stated the correct petal colour was white.

Tom Rylance from The Lottery Winners appears on the chat thread. Once again, Scott tells people to check them out. He says, “they're the best band to come out of Lancashire...probably ever, actually.”

And now, some ABBA.

Scott says he's picked a bunch of cheesy covers tonight.

Continues with Hungry Like The Wolf by Duran Duran.

Next up, Louis Prima's Just A Gigolo. Scott says he and his brother Ryan used to sing it together in harmony.

Scott does a little burp, says: “It's that Proper Job, it's a bit gassy.”

Jenny Fuller has completed a new tank top for Alan.

Scott goes on to tell a story about the first time Silent Farter was performed live. Jenny had said she was going to create a Keith Flint style tank top for Alan, stars and stripes design. The Doonicans knew it was going to be amazing, but when Scott saw it, he was completely in awe. She'd knitted through the night to have it ready for the gig. Alan wrote Silent Farter with the idea that Scott could sing it, but Scott was having none of it, knowing straight away it was one for Alan. It seems he and Amanda foresaw the magic that would ensue if Alan started pulling off Keith Flint moves. Amanda says it gave Alan a bit of Dutch courage once he'd donned the new tank top and his 'extra plumage' (the red Mohican wig), and Scott backs her up saying that once he was geared up, “he was off, and it was just like shit off a shovel...it were great”.

And now, a song by Wings, Mrs Vandebilt.

Afterwards Scott says the 'Waffle Ringers' will shortly be announced (Raffle Winners). This mis-pronunciation leads to a story about how the Doonicans have been mis-billed on many occasions. Scott says amongst other things they've been called The Bastard-Sons of Val Dunnigan and The Bar-Steward Sons of Van Doonigan. He jokes that at one point he was thinking of doing his own tribute band called That Bastard Van Morrison.

As Scott prepares for the final song, Amanda spots a spider on the roof of the campervan. Slightly panicked, Scott says: "Leave him!...leave him be."

Chas & Dave's Ain't No Pleasing You follows. Before it's played, Scott regales a story about when the Doonicans supported them at Leamington Spa Assembly Rooms (just Scott and Bjorn). He says it was a strange venue because the backstage area has Tammy Wynette's caravan, the duck from Half Man Half Biscuit's Urge For Offal album cover (Scott has a photo of him sitting on this), and a Dalek, which Bjorn climbed inside and wandered around in. At the time, Chas had undergone treatment for cancer, but was in good spirits, and Scott and Amanda had a good chat to both him and Dave.

Scott: "Every time we met them, every time we played with them, they were just really sweet guys."

Goodnights, goodbyes.

Ends.
