General:

Big shout out to Gail Something-Else, tonight's main show guest.

Fans loved her and Scott's Something Stupid duet.

Scott and Amanda's washer died this week: "It was mekkin some rayt noise." Scott rang washer repair man, Bernard, who asked him what it sounded like. When he said "like a helicopter in Vietnam", Bernard concluded the bearings had gone and they'd be better off getting a new one.

Scott and Amanda are going to watch Home Alone II after the aftershow as Amanda has never seen it. Scott reminds her Donald Trump makes an appearance in it.

First song: Erasure, A Little Respect.

The Wildhearts, Caffeine Bomb is up next.

Then Breakfast At Tiffany's by Deep Blue Something.

108 people are watching at around twenty minutes in.

Rory Gallagher's Shadow Play follows.

And after, the REM classic Losing My Religion.

Scott produces a small box, received in the post earlier. It's from Burt Chimpcaster from The Plough Inn at Mitford (a furry toy chimp who also masquerades as the pub's PR and Entertainment Manager...according to online sources). First he lifts out a letter, penned by Burt himself in scrawly childlike writing, cracking him up. Then the main gift is revealed as a circular beer pump clip featuring an image of Burt sipping a pint, with 'Chimpcaster' written across the top.

Raffle winners are announced and it's a special prize this week as not only will they receive a Doonicans' CD, Gail Something-Else is also offering her new album.

Final song of the night: Roy Wood's Blackberry Way.

Amanda starts laughing near the end and there's some major snortage :)

Scott recommends fans check out The Star Botherers.

Ends: "Cheers! Byyee."
