Trivia: The second half of this Big Neet In was the official launch party for the Leap of Faith 2 Project where people had pledged an amount of money, not knowing what they would receive. The items were a book styled on the original penguin books, and a CD "Cpl. Kipper's Barnsley Trades Club Turn." This was a CD that was rerecorded 10 years after its first release. The launch party should have been at the Lantern Theatre in Sheffield.

The book accompanying the CD was written by Scott Doonican and describes the stories behind the songs. The foreword to the book was written by Ringo Starr.

The CD was mixed and remastered by Joel Howel and includes contributions from several musicians including Danny Doonican who wrote "No fillin' in me pie", Eliza Carthy, Richard Kitson, Kathryn Roberts and Kate Rusby.

The songs can be purchased via bandcamp or from the Doonicans website.

The newly released song "Binful Of Bottles" had been shared by the fans and had become the most popular thing that the band had ever put on facebook!

Quotes: Scott commented that "it's been another long week, but we get through it together don't we".

Discussing Ringo Starr writing the introduction to the book, Scott commented that he had written the "Foreword, its like foreplay, but not as interesting"

Cheers! Scott said "Cheers" 28 times during this Big Neet In.

Scott's Badges: Scott playing uke sitting on a barrel of beer outside the Old No.7 (from a painting by Terry Brookes), The Wildhearts logo outline & Dennis The Menace.

General:

Tonight's aftershow opens with Scott sat in a shiny green Sgt. Pepper jacket and a somewhat dishevelled wig. Rain is heard teeming down outside.

Scott: "Barnet's all over t'place at minute."

Amanda: "It's great weather for ducks."

Scott says his favourite Doonicans' album of all time is The Tarn Machine, but Cpl. Kipper is creeping up into second place. Of the latter, he says he's always loved and hated it in equal measure.

A discussion takes place about fan Leila Buckmaster's name. Whenever he sees it, Scott imagines she should be "going from The Shire to Mordor", thinks it sounds like a Hobbit moniker, while Amanda pictures it being in an Arnold Schwarzenegger movie. Either way, both agree it's cool.

Andy Tranter from Headsticks pops up on the chat.

Amanda says her mum might be "breaking out" (of hospital) tomorrow.

Scott's recent release, Binful Of Bottles, has had a whopping 56,000 views to date.

He apologises to fan Cullen Henshaw for calling him out as "being as much of a Penguin Classics geek as me...but that's fine, because us Penguin Classic geeks should stick together".

As Scott hands the camera to Amanda before the first song, she elevates her foot and shows everyone she has a badly bruised big toe. It transpires Scott dropped a piece of wood on it.

Scott: "Oh, look at this...look at you goin' fert sympathy vote, like Donald Trump pretending he's got Covid."

She keeps her foot in view.

Scott: "To be honest, you've got feet like a griffin."

First song is a cover of Rory Gallagher's Barley & Grape Rag.

Next up, Bob Dylan's Subterranean Homesick Blues.

Followed by Steve Harley & Cockney Rebel's Make Me Smile.

Final song: Maggie May by Rod Stewart.

94 viewers are still tuned in at the 36 minute mark.

Scott and Amanda sit next to each other for thank yous and goodbyes.

They're planning to watch Bad Boys 3.

The pouring rain continues.
